

ECCM Symposium2007
the productivity of culture

Acculturation and Citizenship
Catalysts for the European Urban Space

Kostas Theologou N.T.U.A
e-mail: ktheolog@central.ntua.gr

Rethinking Cultural Relativism

- Nowadays we are urgently invited to rethink on the philosophical perception of “Cultural Relativism” due to the opening of the national borders in Europe, the facilitation of transportation and movement of the European citizens (either for work or tourism) or due to the immigration of people from outside the EU borders.
- My standpoint is that through the basic concept of Cultural Relativism one could formulate an efficient argument which enhances the societal unification of the multicultural, multilingual, multinational, multiracial, multi-facial and complicated European urban Space

The basic point of Cultural Relativism

C.R. enhances Tolerance

- Different societies have different moral codes; no objective standard can be used to judge one societal code better than another
- Customs of other societies are not inferior to our own (only different!)
- Our feelings towards the Other are not necessarily “perceptions” of the truth

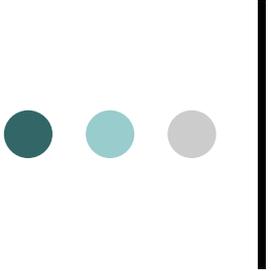

Acculturation and Citizenship

Catalysts for the European Urban Space

- ◆ Acculturation: osmosis through integration
- ◆ European citizenship: Supra-national
- ◆ Local Tradition+ Values: contributors to European Culture
- ◆ Supranational Identity towards Europeanization

● ● ● | The European Stake: the unification

- A nascent non-ethnic identity in a Pan-demos Europe: conceiving the world under a wider (mainly cultural) perspective
 - the common language
 - the universality of arts
 - the museums
 - the global environmental crisis issue
- Need for the deconstruction of the homogenous “national space”

A pan-demotic consciousness

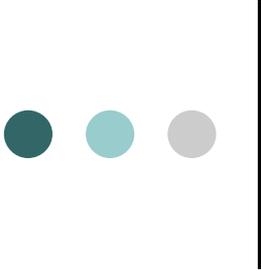

- Education- Arts- Media
- Mobility of working citizens
- The projection of paradigms of a common citizenship all over Europe
- Access to Public Discussions
- Access to Information and Knowledge

The educated and well informed citizen is the nucleus for the democratic society

Towards Europeanization

- The familiarization of children with the idea of globalisation and the continuity of cultures (both historically and geographically), by highlighting the similarities and the divergences
- The exposure to common rituals, myths and symbols and the creation of shared experiences.
- The internalisation of the following set of values: on equality, respect for differences, cooperation and solidarity in a European framework and perspective

ECCM Symposium2007
the productivity of culture

Acculturation and Citizenship
Catalysts for the European Urban Space

Thank you

Kostas Theologou, Dr N.T.U.A

e-mail: ktheolog@central.ntua.gr